The Creation Entertainment's "Salute to Supernatural" this past weekend was held in Burbank, CA where many of the fan favorite series' cast and recurring stars attended. AfterBuzz TV's Supernatural after show hosts, Tom Connolly, Lyndsey Wegner, Katie Campbell and Mikaela Phillips attended the Supernatural convention and interviewed some of the show's cast such as, the 'King of Hell' himself Crowley (Mark Sheppard), Castiel (Misha Collins), Cain (Timothy Omundson), young John Winchester (Matt Cohen) and Gadreel (Tahmoh Penikett).

While rumors have been circulating and Supernatural fans have been speculating the return of Cain this season, played by actor Timothy Omundson, it wasn't until Omundson's one on one interview with host Connolly that he revealed fans can expect to see him return to screens as Cain in episode 14 of Supernatural this season. The title for this episode has yet to be released, fueling fan curiosity even more to the episode's upcoming plot and storyline. Fans can also expect to catch Omundson on ABC's four week comedy extravaganza, 'Galavant' which begins airing January 4th 2015.

Hosts Campbell and Phillips interviewed British actor Mark Sheppard. Sheppard, renowned for his work in other series such as 'Battlestar Galactica', 'Leverage' and 'Warehouse 13', had a few things to say about Supernatural's season 10. When asked about the Crowley and Dean 'bromance' Mark said, "I don't know if any relationship is over, until Crowley says it's over." Sheppard also went on to credit the wonderful writers of Supernatural for creating these storylines that they get to act.

Matt Cohen spoke to Phillips about his experience portraying the young John Winchester and his upcoming projects/works which includes negotiations for a big picture deal with book series 'Rune Lords'. When asked if he had in fact experienced any 'supernatural' incidents in his life, the answer was yes. Cohen went into depth about occurrences after the passing of his grandpa. Cohen jokes, reassuring that this story really happened and he couldn't make it up even if he tried. Fans' favorite angel, Misha Collins, who plays Castiel, spoke with host Wegner where he admitted his favorite episode of season 10 is episode 5 "Fan Fiction".

Supernatural airs every Tuesday 9/8c on The CW.
